Congress plans to take action that will block access to good, quality health care for millions of Americans. Here are a few examples of what these changes would mean for Connecticut:

- 248,000 residents would lose health coverage
- over 500,000 residents with pre-existing conditions may not be able to get coverage
- CT would lose over $1 billion in federal subsidies for individuals and Medicaid funds

Senators Richard Blumenthal and Chris Murphy, are ready to fight to protect our care and stand up to those who want to destroy health care programs we all count on.

Fighting for Health Care: The Time to Resist is Now

This is the current plan of the Republican majority in Congress and the Trump administration to break health care:

1. Repeal key provisions of the Affordable Care Act, leaving millions without coverage and raising the cost of coverage for everyone else
2. Turn back the clock on women's access to contraception and reproductive health care
3. Turn Medicaid into a block grant program that will not keep up with health care costs, hurting working families and seniors who rely on Medicaid and breaking state budgets
4. Turn Medicare into an underfunded voucher program

Time Will Reveal: Will We Be Able to Live Our Healthiest Lives?

To state the obvious, we are entering a new season and starting next month we will be glued to various news sources to see how President-elect Trump's first 100 days on the job impact America. Those who've been selected for potential Cabinet positions have garnered tons of opinion pieces and generated lots of conversation over the past few weeks.

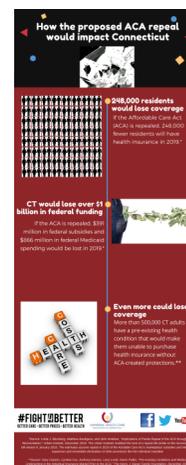

Repealing Obamacare Could Leave 59 Million Americans Uninsured

The goal of the Affordable Care Act was to whittle down the number of uninsured Americans and bring order to the Wild West of the individual insurance market. According to a new analysis by the Urban Institute think tank, if the law is repealed, both of those things would be undone. In fact, the uninsured rate would likely be even worse than it was before the law was passed.
